

Social and Personal

Mrs. Randolph Watkins, of 94 Floyd Avenue, was hostess at a very pretty tea yesterday afternoon at her home, given in honor of Mrs. Augustine Royall Turpin, a bride of the winter. The house was decorated in pink and white, and the punch bowl, and a crystal vase of pink and white carnations, tied with pink tulle ribbon, was arranged on the tea table in the dining-room. Mrs. Thomas A. Smyth and Mrs. Small, of the house, presided at the punch bowl, and those doing honors in the dining-room were Mrs. Hugh Rose, Miss Virginia Watkins, Miss Nannie Patton, and Miss Virginia Whiteley.

The guests of honor were her wedding gown of white charmeuse draped in chiffon and finished with lace and carried an armful of pink sweet peas. Mrs. Watkins was dressed in black marquisette, made over pale green satin, and held a bouquet of red carnations, and others in the receiving line were Mrs. J. W. Byrnes, of Washington, who is visiting Mrs. Watkins, and Miss Nora Randolph. Mrs. Byrnes wore a black charmeuse trimmed in real lace and rhinestones with a bouquet of red carnations and Miss Randolph a gown of pale pink charmeuse made with an overdress of lavender chiffon and a large bouquet of pink roses. About ninety guests were called during the afternoon.

Southern similes and quantities of fragrant pink roses decorated the Country Club of Virginia last night, when Miss Nell Carnell, a debutante of last winter, gave a lovely dance. There were nearly 150 guests present, and an orchestra, screened by palms and bay trees, played for dancing. The gallery running around the ballroom was hung with similes and pink flowers and wall pockets filled with pink roses were used every where about the club. The dining-room was also hung with similes and pink roses and the tables at which the guests were seated for supper were arranged with huge baskets of roses tied with tulle. At the chaperones' table, which was set in the center of the main dining-room, the centerpiece was made of large baskets of roses with smaller ones arranged around the places of the guests. Favors for the girls were tiny nosegays of artificial flowers and cards tied with ribbon and a pink rose for the men.

It was one of the prettiest entertainments given at the Country Club this winter. There was no formal receiving line and dancing was kept up until after midnight, when a special car, chartered for the purpose, brought the guests back to the city. Miss Carnell wore an imported gown of palest sea-blue chiffon embroidered with crystal beads and made over white satin with a corsage bouquet of pink orchids. Miss Carnell's mother, Mrs. J. D. Carnell, was dressed in black lace over white satin and wore a bouquet of pink carnations.

Miss Leslie Foster, of Leesburg, and Miss Frazer, of Lexington, Ky., arrived in Richmond Wednesday night and are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. Francis Green, at 89 West Franklin Street, for two weeks. Miss Frazer, who has been visiting relatives in Leesburg for some time, has just returned from an extended stay in

VIRGINIA STATE WITHOUT GRAFT

Governor Mann Highly Praises Fair Reputation of This Commonwealth.

SPEAKS IN PHILADELPHIA
Tells Hearers That Political Campaign Promises Never Are Carried Out.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
Philadelphia, Pa., January 20.—That the ever-increasing growth of the South and the solidification of the bond of sisterhood between the Northern and Southern States is one of the greatest things for the progress of America and will insure the successful solution of any problem that may confront the United States, the tariff problem not excepted, was the statement of Governor William Hodges Mann, of Virginia, in an address delivered before the Pennsylvania Lumbermen's Association here to-day.

One of the high points in Governor Mann's interesting speech was the statement that, to his certain knowledge, none of the campaign pledges of various successful presidential candidates ever has been carried out. Governor Mann did not, however, express his opinion as to whether or not President-Elect Wilson will fulfill his campaign pledges.

The Governor's speech dealt with the wonderful progress of the South following the Civil War. Many interesting and amusing anecdotes of the war and the relations of the North and South were given by the Governor.

"I appreciate the invitation to come up here from Virginia to address you gentlemen today," said Governor Mann, "chiefly because the invitation came from the Governor of Pennsylvania. Sixty years ago I would not have received the invitation and I am sure that sixty-five years ago, I should have not accepted it, even if it had come from the Governor of Pennsylvania. No matter where we are raised or under what influences we are brought up, an American citizen is an American citizen no matter where he lives or where you meet him. We have reached the time when we must stand together, when State lines and sectional lines have been obliterated. The war from 1861 to 1865 was the culmination of force which had been gathering for years, which had been gathering from time to time but finally the time came when no postponement could be made."

Touching upon politics and the tariff question, he said: "Political parties govern the country at the present day, and the party with the greatest number of men behind it rules—generally. Every election promises of great reform are made. Every four years we hear promises of what will be done if the party in power is re-elected. These promises are never carried out. The tariff question has been a disturbing element for years. We are not divided upon sectional or political lines. Of the time where we are raised or under what influences we are brought up, an American citizen is an American citizen no matter where he lives or where you meet him. We have reached the time when we must stand together, when State lines and sectional lines have been obliterated. The war from 1861 to 1865 was the culmination of force which had been gathering for years, which had been gathering from time to time but finally the time came when no postponement could be made."

The Governor was met at Broad Street Station by F. C. Williamson, president of the Lumbermen's Association, and a member of the reception committee. He went directly to the Hotel Walton. He later went to the City Hall in Mayor Blankenburg's automobile and had a short chat with the Mayor in his office. Because of pressing municipal business, the Mayor was unable further to entertain his visitor this morning, but his motor was placed at the Governor's disposal, and a sight-seeing trip was made through Fairmount Park.

This afternoon he visited the automobile show with the entertainment committee of the Lumbermen's Association, and this evening he was the guest of honor at a theatre box party.

READ THEIR SPEECHES WITH HEADS COVERED

Only One Ruler in Europe Who Has Broken From This Custom.

BY LA MARQUISE DE FONTENAY.
MONARCHS all over Europe in their speeches from the throne to the national legislature, either from their own palaces or in the houses of Parliament, invariably don their hats, their helmets, or their chapeau while speaking, in token of their sovereignty, and for the purpose of emphasizing their supremacy over all present. They generally enter the chamber of throne room bareheaded, and then cover their heads when they begin to read their speech. There is only one ruler in Europe who has broken with this custom, and who declines to follow it, namely, King William II. of Wurtemberg. On the most cordial terms with the Socialist leaders of the national legislature, he declares that in the modern days the sovereignty of the crown is shared by the people, that the two things go together, and that since the representatives of the people present are all bareheaded, there is no reason why he, also the representative of the people, should not similarly remain uncovered.

King William of Wurtemberg is a veteran of the War of 1870, and one of the only two remaining sovereigns of the German empire who wear on his breast the Order of the Iron Cross, in token of his having taken part in that campaign, the other being the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz. The King is not on particularly friendly terms with the Kaiser, there being numerous differences of opinion between them, owing to the reluctance of the King to submit to any affectation of supremacy on the part of the Kaiser.

Colonel Sir William Manning, who has just been appointed to the governor-generalship of Jamaica, is an officer who has seen plenty of active service, and that a soldier should be appointed to this post in lieu of a civilian serves to emphasize the military importance which Jamaica has acquired in view of the opening of the Panama Canal. It is no secret that the garrison on the island is to be very considerably strengthened in the near future; that preparations are already in progress for the extension on a large scale of the barracks accommodation, and for the development of the defenses of the island, which are to be armed with the very heaviest guns in existence. For England is determined to assist the United States in keeping open the Panama Canal against any power or coalition of powers that may attempt either to close or destroy it.

Sir William Manning, who as Governor-General of the island will also be commander-in-chief of the military forces, receiving a salary of $25,000 a year, with furnished official residences and very liberal allowances, is a graduate of Sandhurst, served with the Fourth Regiment of Foot, and has seen active service in the second Boer war, in three of the northwest frontier wars of India, in Central Africa in 1881, in Rhodesia in 1894, while he has commanded the several of the force against the Mad Mullah in Somland. Besides this, he has been Governor of British Central Africa, Governor of Nyassaland, and organizing administrator of several of England's other great dependencies in the Dark Continent. His breast is covered with war medals, and his body with the scars of wounds received in the various campaigns in which he has been engaged. In spite of this, he is in excellent condition, and in the full vigor of manhood, barely fifty years of age, and has been married for two years to a daughter of Charles J. Ross, of Heatherdene, Bagehot.

It was especially in Somaliland that Sir William (who owes the handle to his name to his knighthood of the Order of St. Michael and St. George) showed remarkable qualities and resourcefulness as a keen-witted commander, enjoying the confidence of the British and the natives alike. He takes the place in Jamaica of Sir Sydney Olivier, whom I have frequently described in these letters as a professed Socialist, one of the pillars of the Fabian Society in London, an intimate chum of Bernard Shaw, and as strongly opposed to rank, pomp, ceremony and, above all, to everything pertaining to things military or to war.

Sir James Turing's succession to the ancient baronetcy of Turing of Foveran, in Aberdeenshire, through the death of his father at the age of eighty-seven, serves to recall the fact that only last summer the late Sir Robert Turing caused his right to the honor to be passed upon by the baronetage committee of the House of Commons, decided in his favor, with the result that King George ordered his name to be added to the official list of baronets. If Sir Robert took this step, it is because no patent remains in existence of this baronetcy, the document having evidently been lost or destroyed during the near 300 years which have elapsed since the creation of the honor by Charles II. of England.

The family of Turing owned the barony of Foveran away back in the fourteenth century. But the name of Turing to the reign of Mary, Queen of Scots.

The head of the family in the early part of the seventeenth century was John Turing, one of the great Scottish lords, created a baronet in 1638, and three years later Charles gave Sir John several patents of baronetcy bearing his sign-manual, but Sir John never accepted them, and Sir John might sell them and insert the name of the purchaser. This was frequently done by the three Stuart Kings of Great Britain. Sir John was present with Charles at the battle of Worcester, and he was the official record of that encounter is mentioned as baronet. It was on the strength of this evidence that the late Sir Robert, after proving his descent from Sir John, had his baronetcy recognized.

HAIR MAKES PLEA OF GUILTY
Freely Forgiven by Swann, His Old-Time Friend, for Forging Name to Two Checks.

After an affecting reconciliation with the man whose name he had fraudulently used, Charles Hanifer, the young machinist who was arrested by Burns detectives in Quincy, Mass., for forging the name of James F. Swann, a Caroline County farmer, to two checks on the Farmers' National Bank of Richmond, yesterday confessed his guilt, and preliminary hearing in Police Court, and was sent on to the grand jury.

Upon his return to Richmond in the custody of the detectives, Hanifer broke down and confessed to Captain McMahon that on the night of December 10, he had forged Swann's name to one check for $20 and another for $21 and had secured payment from the Farmers' National Bank. Captain McMahon has looked up the young man since, and has declared that he has found no had spot except this one fall from grace.

The father of James F. Swann raised Hanifer, whom he took at an early age from an orphan asylum in Cleveland, Ohio, and the Caroline farmer and the youthful forger fell drawn together by all but ties of blood. Swann had not seen the young machinist since his flight until yesterday, when he was arraigned in Court, and when the two faced each other, both broke down and wept freely. Swann was allowed to go into the cage with Hanifer following the court proceedings, and there the two men exchanged further expressions of affection.

Hanifer will enter a plea of guilty, and throwing himself upon the mercy of the court, will beg clemency on the strength of his previous good record. It is understood that the plea will be accepted, and that the court will exercise all possible leniency in this peculiar case. The position of the bank is unknown.

The active members of the Ashland Music Club tendered a delightful reception on Wednesday afternoon to the associate members in the parish house. Palms and evergreens were used in decorating. Mrs. Allen Maury, assisted by Mrs. William M. Lasher, received the guests, numbering about eighty. Mrs. Anna Vaden was at the punch bowl and Mesdames Frank Day and Blasingame assisted her. Misses Margaret Tilley, Clark Hoofnagle and Martha Hughes served the dainty refreshments. The program was a most attractive one. Mrs. Hequembourg, of Richmond, was in charge. The talented artists were from her violin class in Richmond and those who took part were little Miss Mary Lockland and Masters Ben Lockland, Reaumur Stearns, Sam Schiles, Henry Schroeder and Willard Alley, with Mrs. Hequembourg as accompanist. They received quite an ovation. Other numbers were a pretty little Scotch song by Mrs. Blasingame and a violin selection by Mrs. Hequembourg, with Miss Lee Goodwin as accompanist.

Misses Stuart Blanton, Anne P. Hunter, Elsie Blackwell, Marguerite Wightman, Annie Macon Potts and Marion Lasher were among the guests at a beautifully appointed luncheon given on Wednesday by Miss Ingeborg Lockland and Masters Ben Lockland, in honor of Miss Micala, of Louisiana.

The program at the Woman's Club on Tuesday was one of the most delightful of the year. Mrs. Barrett Sydnor's paper on Queen Elizabeth was a graphic description of the virgin queen and her influence on the times.

That was followed by a reading by Mrs. Frank Day from Kenilworth. Mrs. Scholard Fox gave an interesting account of the life of Queen Elizabeth, and a treatise on the hookworm.

Mrs. E. W. Newman was hostess for the Hearts Club on Tuesday night. Miss Pattee C. Leake leaves Friday for Norfolk, Va., to visit her niece Mrs. J. Lindsey Patton.

In the matter of the Ashland Gas Sewer & Water Company, Inc., bankrupt, an order was entered by Judge Wadsworth of the United States District Court today requiring the creditors of said bankrupt, as shown by its schedule, The Land Title and Trust Company of Philadelphia, Trustee in the general mortgage of the bankrupt company, and the town of Ashland, to show cause on the 17th day of February, 1913, at 10:30 o'clock A. When Your Hair is Faded or Brittle

"A beautiful growth of long, glossy and fluffy hair can be had by every woman—hair of a rich, even color, writes Mrs. Mae Marilyn in the Los Angeles Post.
"The only condition to this is that shampooing be indulged in at least once a month. And a word about what to use. Never, no never, employ soaps or mixtures containing 'free' alkali, because of the disastrous effects following. A dependable and really delightful shampoo mixture can be made by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water. This is enough for a thorough cleansing of both scalp and hair. After a canthrox shampoo the hair dries evenly and quickly and regains its former shade, softness and rich gloss. Nothing is so effective for removing dandruff and keeping the scalp healthy and pliant."—Advertisement.

St. Fortunatus was born in 530 A. D., and became father confessor to Queen Clotilda, consort of King Clovis I, and after his death abbot of a sisterhood, being eventually canonized as Saint Radgond. In her pious she deemed it well to make save stewards in a manner of tempting dishes for her father confessor; first, because in that way she thought she was doing justice to the capabilities of the food that nature provided, and secondly, because she liked to discuss her culinary efforts with her father confessor, and to share with him the exultation of success. In one of the French cathedrals a stained glass window is said to show St. Radgond in the nun's habit, carrying a smoking ragout to St. Fortunatus, who is seated, wearing a bishop's mitre, at a table, furnished with wine cups and other accessories of a choice banquet. Above is a panel, showing St. Lawrence chained to his gridiron, and very evidently "burning the roast."
